THE CHALLENGE

Manual Rebate Management Creates Risk, Cost, and Missed Opportunities

Many organizations still manage rebate agreements, accruals, and payouts through spreadsheets, email, or disconnected ERP modules. Over time, this leads to calculation errors, delayed payouts, poor visibility, and missed opportunities for margin optimization across customers, products, and channels.

On the front lines:

Pricing and commercial teams

Pricing teams struggle to maintain complex rebate calculations, growth targets, and tiered structures across multiple customer segments.

Sales teams

Sales teams lack real-time visibility into active rebate programs by customer and product, causing confusion during negotiations.

Finance teams

Finance teams have poor visibility into rebate accruals, forecast accuracy, and actual versus expected payout amounts.

When market conditions shift or business performance fluctuates, updating rebate calculations becomes slow and error-prone. Fragmented data and manual processing delay even simple changes to rebate structures.

The impact:

- Margin leakage from incorrect rebate calculations or overpayments to customers
- Profit erosion from customers not meeting performance thresholds without visibility or intervention
- Limited visibility into which rebate programs drive the most profitable customer behaviors

Without unified rebate design, execution, and monitoring, teams move too slowly or rely on manual workarounds, risking profitability and damaging customer relationships.
